'Portfolios for developing student capabilities'

This is a customised version of a fully-featured open source ePortfolio software called Mahara. Mahara supports blogging and social networking. The site provides teachers and students with a teaching and learning environment that is highly student-centred, one that can support and enhance personalised learning. Students can incorporate blogs (reflective writing), audio, video, embedded powerpoints, graphics, posters, concept maps and photographs in creative ways to provide evidence of learning activities, processes and/or learning outcomes. The use of student-created media provides an opportunity for students to express themselves creatively.
